

- I never expected to get hit by a car. The only good thing about my accident was that I was covered by insurance governed by Michigan No Fault rules. Like many in Michigan I did not have a job at the moment of my accident, nor did I have any other form of health insurance to cover the bills. My father left retirement and returned to full-time employment after my accident, because my parents feared the costs that would follow. They knew their retirement income would not be enough to pay my bills.
- The Michigan No Fault Law provides protection not only for the injured and their families, it is good business for Michigan. With proper health care paid for by the insurance companies, many of the injured return to a productive life. Michigan residents are employed in health care and support services for those injured and that generates tax revenues for the state. Those jobs are a result of insurance covering services mandated by the Michigan No Fault Law.
- When buying insurance, many will assume that they are not going to get into an accident. They buy the minimum necessary to get a Michigan auto license. Switching from the current law to one that makes the type of coverage a choice will result in many more Michigan families facing the disaster of auto accidents with inadequate protection. The Michigan No Fault Law works for Michigan residents - please do not change it for something that will prove to be inferior.
